

U.S. Carrier Food Allergy Policies

U.S. Carrier	Policy
Alaska	We cannot prevent passengers from bringing products containing nuts or other allergens (e.g. service animals) onboard our flights. Some First Class meals and meals for purchase in the main cabin may contain nuts. Therefore, Alaska Airlines is unable to guarantee a nut- or allergen-free flight. Attempting to do this would create a false sense of security for passengers with severe allergies. We encourage passengers who are allergic to nuts to bring their own food items for travel. Passengers with severe allergies are also encouraged to consult with their doctor regarding the safety of air travel. Please advise the gate agent if you would like to pre-board to cleanse your immediate seating area.
Allegiant	Allegiant recognizes some passengers suffer from mild to severe allergies to peanuts, tree nuts, or animal dander. Unfortunately, Allegiant is unable to guarantee an allergen-free flight. Inflight food offerings may contain trace amounts of nut ingredients, or may have been processed in facilities that also process nuts. In addition, we are unable to prevent other passengers from bringing nuts and/or products containing nuts onboard our flights. It is each passenger's responsibility to consult with healthcare professionals to understand the risks of onboard exposure to allergens and carry any necessary medication, such as an EpiPen®. Allergic passengers are welcome to pre-board to clean their immediate seating area. And upon request, we will attempt to reseat allergic passengers to minimize exposure.
American	Although we don't serve peanuts, we do serve other nut products (such as warmed nuts) and there may be trace elements of unspecified nut ingredient, including peanut oils, in meals and snacks. Additionally, other customers can bring peanuts or other tree nuts on board. We can't accommodate requests to not serve certain foods or to provide nut "buffer zones." Our planes are cleaned regularly, but can't guarantee the removal of nut allergens on surfaces or in the air filters. Because of this, we can't guarantee you won't be exposed to peanuts or other tree nuts during flight, and we strongly encourage those with allergies to take all necessary medical precautions before flying.
Delta	When you notify us that you have a peanut allergy, we'll refrain from serving peanuts and peanut products onboard your flight. Instead, we'll offer non-peanut snack items to everyone. If you would like additional time during the boarding process to clean your seat area, please let the gate agent know that you would like to pre-board. You're welcome to board early and clean your seat area in case of traces of allergens but you must bring your own cleaning materials. We also recommend that if you have a significant allergic reaction, you bring appropriate medications on board (e.g. EpiPen®). Though we always aim to work with you to make your flight safe and comfortable, we cannot guarantee a peanut- or nut-free flight or prohibit other customers from carrying nut products aboard. If you need to make us aware of a nut allergy for an upcoming flight, please visit My Trips to fill out the Accessibility Service Request form or call Delta reservations at 404-209-3434.
Frontier	Due to the presence of food allergens in the snacks served, Frontier Airlines cannot guarantee an allergen-free environment on its flights. We also cannot prevent passengers from bringing products containing nuts or other allergens (e.g. service animals) onboard our flights. Attempting to do this would create a false sense of security for passengers with severe allergies. We encourage customers to review any health concerns with their physicians prior to flying.
JetBlue	Our customers that have allergies to nuts or animals can request a MEDA SSR be added to their booking and should alert JetBlue crewmembers at the gate regarding the allergy accommodations needed. Nut allergies If you have a nut allergy, JetBlue's policy is to discretely create a buffer zone for nut consumption one row in front of and one row behind the customer with the allergy. Customers in these rows will be asked to not consume any nuts during the flight. JetBlue does not offer any nuts in the free snack choices and does not offer peanuts in the snack choices available for onboard purchase. JetBlue does not provide a formal announcement on board the aircraft or in the gate area regarding the restrictive consumption of nuts, and we can't prevent customers from bringing nuts onboard or consuming them aboard the aircraft.
Southwest	We don't serve peanuts on our flights. Instead, depending on flight length, we offer pretzels and a few other complimentary snacks. However, many of the snacks we serve may be packaged in the same facility as peanuts, so we can't guarantee that they don't contain peanut particles or oil. We also can't prevent others from bringing peanuts or peanut products onboard and can't guarantee that peanut remnants won't be on the plane floor, seats, or tray tables. If you have food allergies and intolerances, we encourage you to read the labels of all snacks before consuming. Since we can't provide snacks that will accommodate all preferences and dietary needs, consider bringing your own snacks with you.
Spirit	For those with peanut allergies: we do sell peanuts. We cannot guarantee guests will not be exposed to peanuts during the flight and strongly encourage guests to take all necessary medical precautions to prepare for the possibility of exposure. In an effort to ensure your well being, please alert our gate agents and flight attendants if you do have an allergy, and we will create a peanut-free buffer-zone for you which includes the row you'll be seated in, the row in front of you, the row behind you and the corresponding rows on either side of the aisle as well.
United	United is committed to the safety of its customers, including customers with major food allergies. United does not serve pre-packaged peanuts on our flights. However, we prepare and serve meals and snacks utilizing a variety of other ingredients including major food allergens. Due to the presence of food allergens in the processing environment and in meals and snacks served, United cannot guarantee an allergen-free meal or environment on its flights. Further, it is not possible to prevent customers from bringing food items on board that contain major food allergens including peanuts. If you have a severe food allergy and are traveling on a flight please notify a flight attendant on board the aircraft that you request an allergy buffer zone so we can attempt to notify customers seated nearby to refrain from eating any allergen-containing products they may have brought on board. Please understand that we cannot prevent any customer from eating the products they have brought on board. For operational reasons, we cannot remove any onboard products based on individual customer requests, and we do not guarantee allergen-free buffer zones on our aircraft. Since we cannot guarantee allergen-free flights and cannot prevent customers from consuming allergen-containing products, we encourage customers to review any health concerns with their physicians prior to flying.
